EXCERPTS FROM SUGAR CITY TIMES 1906
"SUGAR CITY, THE MODEL CITY"

"If, as has been said, the development of a perfect child must begin with the proper training of its grandparents, no less so perhaps does a perfectly developed city require similar ancestry. At least it is significant that the Townsite company, who acted as the parent promoters of our little city, were men, who for at least three generations had been more or less actively engaged in just this line of work. They had profited by the mistakes and triumphs which had elsewhere attended their task of establishing and upbuilding cities, and as a natural result, their youngest child – our city – received the most splendid birthright of all.

"The policy pursued in planning and laying out our town was apparently perfect."
